

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR - FRANK V. ROTONDO

Biography

Frank V. Rotondo is the Executive Director of the Georgia Association of Chiefs of Police and has served in that capacity since the spring of 1996. He is responsible for directly and indirectly managing over 575 police chiefs and heads of law enforcement agencies as well as hundreds of other law enforcement professionals. He is responsible for developing organizational goals and statewide law enforcement policies, as well as providing technical guidance and supervising mandated police chief executive training programs.

Mr. Rotondo also provides management oversight to a variety of state and federally funded programs such as the Georgia Law Enforcement Certification Program, a state-wide domestic violence management training and reduction initiative, a computer grant initiative to aid departments with state of the art technology, and the Georgia Law Enforcement Command College which has awarded advanced degrees from Columbus State University to over five hundred law enforcement professionals.

He works directly with legislators, senators, representatives as well as other government leaders at both the state and federal levels to pass legislation critical to the law enforcement community including Homeland Security funding distribution programs, revisions to retirement regulations, family violence and stalking, national computer registration requirements, and Brady related gun control measures

Mr. Rotondo is an authority in numerous management areas, such as motivation of personnel, budgeting, community policing, departmental organization, employee selection, leadership and discipline, ethics.

He has served as Chief of Police, providing supervision to law enforcement officers and administrative oversight on all departmental issues. He has also received numerous departmental awards and commendations for outstanding performance in the field of law enforcement, including the highest police valor award.

He has evaluated law enforcement training courses in conjunction with the National Law Enforcement Training Academy and has served as a distinguished lecturer at colleges and universities in several states, specializing in law enforcement ethics.

Executive Director Rotondo was awarded Georgia Peace Officers Standards and Training (POST) certification with highest overall average, distinguished student honors and highest academic average.

Prior to his work with the Georgia Association of Chiefs of Police, Mr. Rotondo served as Chief of Police for the City of Helen. He is retired from the Suffolk County Police Department in New York after a distinguished twenty-year career. He holds a Master of Professional Studies degree, with distinction, and a Bachelor of Science degree from the New York Institute of Technology. He also received an Associate in Applied Science degree from the State University of New York.